DEMOCRATS STILL IN SENATE RACE - POLL

The latest Morgan Senate polls shows the Australian Democrats are still in the Senate race in South Australia, according to Lead SA Senate Candidate Ruth Russell.

"The Democrat vote in SA is stable at 3% but the vote of the Greens has dropped to 5% and Family First has to 4%" Ms Russell said.

"The entry of Mr. Xenophon means that there could be two independent Senators from South Australia. On the latest poll figures I stand a good chance of being one of those Senators."

"South Australians have benefited from the expert legislative work of Australian Democrats Senators for 30 years. Janine Haines was our first Senator for our State and that proud tradition continues today with the work of Senator Natasha Stott Despoja."

"I look forward to carrying on the Democrat baton when Senator Stott Despoja retires in June next year and continuing the Democrats commitment to honesty, compassion and tolerance," she said.
